Recommendation No. 94.

Under Rule 379 of the Jail Manual, the proportion of prisoners employed as Jail servants that is to say as cooks, barbers, water carriers, scavengers etc., and hospital attendants shall not exceed 15 percent of the total number of prisoners in the Jail except during epidemics when the number may be increased on the requisition of the Medical Officer the action taken being duly reported for the sanction of the Inspector General. The Prison Reforms Committee in paragraph 27 of Chapter IV of the Report observe that the proportion of prisoners who may be employed as jail servants and hospital attendants which is fixed at a maximum of 15% in the above Rule is too high and may be reduced to 10% as in British India. The Committee observe that as a matter of fact, there is a tendency in the local prisons to employ too many prisoners on ~~manual~~ menial duties, a tendency which requires to be curbed in the interests of the economic regulation and proper distribution of prison labour

As pointed out by the Committee, the proportion of prisoners who may be employed as ~~manual~~ menial servants and hospital assistants in British Indian Jails is 10% (vide Rule 793 and 405 of the Bengal and Madras Manuals)

The Inspector General of Prisons agrees to the acceptanc of the recommendation of the Committee, and says that it may be incorporated in a Rule (Vide extract placed below)
